

Marissa Nardella
Mental Health Worker, Sheppard Pratt Center for Eating Disorders
Future Vote Ambassador, 2009-2016

Marissa Nardella was a Future Vote Ambassador from 2009-2016 throughout middle and high school. She worked as a bilingual Spanish speaking poll worker at the polls, office intern, registered students to vote and serve as poll workers, and planned outreach events to promote the Future Vote Initiative. After graduating from Walter Johnson, Marissa went on to the University of Delaware, where she graduated with an Honors Bachelor of Arts in Psychology and a Bachelor of Arts in Spanish Studies. After graduation, Marissa volunteered for a year in Baton Rouge with City Year, a nonprofit partnered with AmeriCorps that sends volunteers to under-funded, high-need school districts. While in Baton Rouge, she tutored and mentored high school students who were struggling socially and academically. Marissa currently works as a Mental Health Worker at Sheppard Pratt Center for Eating Disorders and plans to apply to graduate school in the fall.
