

Shantay Robinson
Doctoral Candidate, George Mason University

Shantay Robinson is a Writing and Rhetoric doctoral candidate at George Mason University. In addition to having taught English Composition at Clayton State University in Georgia and at George Mason University in Virginia, she taught Professional and Technical Writing in the English Department and Writing for Artists in the College of Art and Design at Mason. She presented papers about art and education at SCAD's (Savannah College of Art and Design) Symposium on Art and Fashion, Georgia State University's New Voices Graduate Student Conference, Georgia State University's Glorious Hair and Academic Identities Conference, Northeast Modern Languages Association Conference, Mason Graduate Interdisciplinary Conference, and New York African Studies Association Conference. In 2019, she sat on a panel at Prizm Art Fair during Miami Art Week.