PRESENTATION: Noyes Foundation
- In 1990, Montgomery County Council planned to close the Noyes Library during a major budget shortfall.
- Community concern, along with the Council’s regard for the unique library, led to an outside the box solution.
- Supporters of the library established the Noyes Foundation as a 501(c)(3) organization the following year and agreed to fund a major part of the library’s operating costs.
- The Foundation began to look at improving the building and services.
  - Making the small building ADA compliant would eat up too much space.
  - There is no basement.
  - There is storage space upstairs, but it is only accessible by ladder.
  - Working with the County, a renovation plan was drafted to include raising the building to add a basement and creating an outside elevator.
    - Historic Preservation of Montgomery County supported a glass elevator.
    - The upstairs would be renovated to include a staff area.
    - The basement would have restrooms and a program space.
    - The County funded the design.
Creating an early literacy flagship for the County.

- In 2017 the Jan Jablonski Early Literacy Training Center was established at the Noyes Library.
- The Noyes Library is across from the Warner Mansion which is now owned by the County.
- Former County Executive Leggett allocated $1.5M towards the construction. The Foundation was to raise $1.6 M; they are halfway there with a little over $800K.
  - Created the Make More Noyes campaign to raise funds.
  - The Foundation put out a request for proposal to find a professional fundraiser.
  - They are now working with a local fundraiser, Anthony Lynch of Lynch Pinnacle Group. He has done fundraisers for many projects including the Naval Memorial and the Martin Luther King, Jr. Memorial. He is currently working pro bono.
  - Kensington community has made contributions to the effort.
- The Noyes Board is comprised of twelve volunteers. They have a great website.
- The Foundation would love for the Board members to share this information with their respective LACs.
- Questions, Feedback, Comments:
  - The Noyes Library was designated as a children’s library in 1972.
  - The library is geared towards children 0-5 years of age.
  - It has a capacity of approximately 90 small children.
  - It has great appeal to children. The community feels that it deserves to remain a children’s library, especially with the addition of the early literacy center.
  - It was deeded to the County as long as it remains a library.
  - Once it has been renovated, the Department hopes to increase the staffing in the building. Also, plans to increase the number of storytimes held per day.
  - Board member Carrie Villar suggested that the Foundation connect with her for possible grant funding sources.
  - There is usable hardscape outside the building.
  - Not sure of the timeline; it is contingent on raising the rest of the needed funding.
  - There is no talk regarding shrinking the budget for the project.
  - Director Vassallo thanked Ms. Dinn and Ms. Ditto for their work in keeping Noyes vital.

Councilmember Jawando continues his Community Conversations. On October 9, he visited the Correctional Facility Library and on October 21 he was at Gaithersburg Library.

As you know, MCPL was poised to discontinue this service due to privacy and security reasons. We will keep you updated when we know more about the direction the company decides to take in the future.

The Urban Libraries Council (ULC) is working to address the e-book issue that is facing all public libraries. Major publishers have introduced severe restrictions to e-book and audiobook lending for public libraries, including restrictions on the sales on new titles and unreasonably high prices. ULC has drafted a statement which they are asking elected officials across the country to sign in support of public libraries. MCPL has requested that the County Executive and County Council sign the statement.
- Work on publicity from the library system to our customers.
McMillan will enact this embargo on public libraries. Each library system will receive only one copy of newly published books. Libraries would pay a huge markup. We do not own the book. Have to purchase again after a certain number of checkouts.

- Save the date:

  - When issues arise, work with the branch managers or the Board chair.
  - Always say, “thank you” for their passion. They don’t have to do what they do. We are grateful for their commitment.
  - Try to stay out of the way. Community engagement in action – democracy.
  - Use LAC Handbook as a guide. Always refer to it as a point of reference.
  - Hear what they have to say and bring it to the Board to share. They are the eyes and ears of their communities.
  - Assume good intent.
  - Get to know the members.
  - Use resources from other Board members.
  - Reach out to branch managers prior to meetings to find out if there is anything they want addressed.

According to the Pew Research Center, most Americans believe local libraries fulfill the educational needs of their communities. MCPL’s Summer Read and Learn (SRP) assists students in maintaining or improving reading proficiency when school is not in session. This “facts sheet” highlights findings from the customer survey.

Making a Difference

As a stay-at-home mom, I use the library programs often—they’ve got great quality and [are] free of charge. I love my library (and all the branches) and am [sic] grateful for all of the programs they offer.

The kids love it and as a low-income family not having the funds to be able to take the kids many places this summer it’s been a great get-away for them to meet new friends and connect with old ones. Thank you for offering such a wonderful program and more.

Making a Difference

One dad told us that last year his daughter (age 8) didn’t finish the program, so this year she was determined to work hard and finish the program to get all the prizes, and she did finally finish in the last week of the program. She was so proud and went around the library telling everyone how hard she worked, and all the other customers congratulated her.

About the 2019 SRP Customer Survey

The goal of the survey was to better understand the SRP’s impact and perceived customer benefit.

The questionnaire comprised statements gauging change in knowledge, behavior, application, and awareness. These were presented as Likert scales in a matrix to indicate levels of customer agreement. Open-ended questions allowed for elaboration. A non-probability sampling method was used to target the respondent pool (i.e., participants are selected as they become available). Enrollment, participation, and completion data were compiled using a commercial web application.
