PRESENTATION: Elizabeth Lang, Assistant Facilities and Accessibility Program Manager

- Creating an Accessible Library
  - Disability is defined by the Americans with Disabilities Act, known as the ADA, as “a person who has a physical or mental impairment that substantially limits one or more major life activities, a person who has a history or record of such impairment, or a person who is perceived by others as having such an impairment.”
  - Accessibility of the library refers to collections, facilities, and services that are easily approached, entered, operated, participated in, and used in a safe and dignified manner by a person who has a disability
    - Libraries should be inclusive, and remove barriers to accessing collections, facilities, and services, and where that isn’t possible, should offer reasonable accommodations in order to provide equal access to people who have disabilities.

- Collections
  - Physical collections
    - When collections are in a physically inaccessible place, such as up a step or on a high shelf, and the barriers cannot be removed, staff must be available to help customers get what they want.
  - Format of Materials
    - Large print • Audiobooks: playaways, CD, e-audio • Digital books, magazines, newspapers • DVD or streaming video with captions • DVD or streaming video audio description • Electronic collection accessibility

- Facilities – Barriers in stairs, doors, signs, lighting, etc.
  - Facilities improvements: •Prop open heavy doors. •Clear items away from push buttons and out of travel paths. •Remove items that stick out from walls, columns, and shelving end panels. •Replace low-contrast, small-print signs and flyers with high-contrast, large print ones. •Shift collections off of the top shelf of high shelving or the bottom shelf of all shelving. •Replace burned out lights and look for glare where lighting can be reduced or redirected.

- Services
  - Staff – Basic guidelines for serving a patron who has a disability
    - Believe them, even if the disability isn’t obvious
    - Don’t make assumptions
    - Address the patron directly
    - Ignore behavior that doesn’t violate behavioral guidelines
    - Ask “How can I help you?”
  - Programs
    - Sensory-friendly events are best-known
    - Include a disability focus in your programs
    - ASL programs: Maryland Deaf Culture Digital Library at marylanddcdl.org
    - Observance months
    - Network with community organizations
    - Assess your program room
  - Technology
    - Public computers
    - Website
    - Videos
    - U.S. Access Board has a set of information and communication tech standards and guidelines at Revised 508 Standards and 255 Guidelines (access-board.gov)

- Accommodations - Accommodations are changes to standard library policies, procedures, and practices that are made to provide equal access to patrons who have disabilities.
  - Reasonable vs unreasonable
    - Policy and procedures: Who addresses requests
    - Procedure for responding
    - Post accommodation statement
    - Train your staff
▪ Service animals
  ➢ Is your dog required because of a disability? If the answer is no, you can tell the person to remove the dog.
  ➢ What task is the dog trained to do?
  ➢ Service dog etiquette
    – No license or certificate needed.
    – No special gear required.
    – Don’t pet or distract the dog.
    – If your community has a leash law, the dog must be on a leash.
    – Allergies and fear of dogs are NOT valid reasons to refuse service.
    – Service dogs-in-training (PUPPIES!) follow the same rules.
    – Can ask the handler to remove the dog if it is misbehaving or not under the control of the handler.
    – Offer to serve the patron without the dog.
